

Running Start

Current Washington State legislation allows high school students to attend their local community college or technical school and earn high school credits and college credits at the same time. The tuition for Running Start students is paid by the student's high school. Students may take any class at the community college for which they qualify. A high school student could attend the community college full time as a Running Start student, or they may become a dual student and take classes at both KSS and the community college. Close coordination with the high school is essential in order to be sure that community college courses meet district requirements for high school graduation. Lab fees, books and transportation are the responsibility of the student. Contact the student's high school counselor for more information. Students attending full time Running Start will be required to complete the Culminating Project through the Alternative High School Program.
